

The upbringing values in Armenian traditional families

by Samvel Ghazaryan

16 May, 2020

Introduction

- The way parents choose to bring up children plays a decisive role “in the child’s socialization process
- It is supposed that the values which are personally essential for parents influence their parenting style are likely to be transferred to the next generation
- A research was conducted to identify the value system of Armenian parents, the formation of these values and are these beliefs imparted to their children.

Overview

- Introduction
- Research Question
- Methodology
- Research Findings
- Conclusion

Research Question

How do parenting practices influence the psychology and value system of children?

Methodology

QUALITATIVE RESEARCH

- Zoom interview with 4 parents, 2 female and 2 male

ONLINE SURVEY

- 100 participants
- Middle aged Armenian parents

FOCUS GROUP

- 3 different focus groups Armenian schools
- each consisting of 10 students

Research Findings

- The household and family which the child grows up in acts as a foundation for the development of their value system.
 - Values are passed down from generation to generation, especially religious and traditional values.
 - Discipline is valuable, but aggressive and strict methods are more likely to be ineffective.
 - Warm and supportive methods yield a netter establishment of personal identity within the child.
-

Conclusion

- The majority of parents adopted an Authoritative parenting style.
- Children with low self-esteem experienced stricter parenting styles throughout their childhood.
- The values of parents are passed down to children more often than not.

Reference List

- Aavik, A., Aavik, T., & Kõrgesaar, J. (2006). Parenting Practices And Personal Values: Comparison Between Parents Of Institutionalized And Non-institutionalized Adolescents.
- Spencer-Oatey, H. (2008). Culturally speaking: culture, communication and politeness theory, second edition, University of Warwick.
- Rohner, R. & Khaleque, A. (2012). Parental acceptance-rejection theory, methods, evidence, and implications. Ethos: Journal of the Society for Psychological Anthropology. 33.
- Rohan, M. J., M. P. Zanna, (1996) "Value transmission in families". In The psychology of values: the Ontario symposium, vol. 8, 253–277. C. Seligman, J. M. Olson, M. P. Zanna, eds. Mahwah: Lawrence Erlbaum Associates.